VOLUME 26 {Entered at the Post Office at Janesville Wis., as second-class matter.} JANESVILLE, WISCONSIN, MONDAY, JULY 3, 1882. {Published Every Evening Except Sunday, at $7 a Year.} NUMBER 94

The New York Legislature has just found out that there are frightful numbers of kerosene oil accidents, and has passed a bill forbidding the use of oil below a certain standard.

It is maintained by some that Mr. Keyes will be a candidate for Congress, and that he will secure the Dane county delegation. He is meeting with so much success in his profession that it is hardly probable that he will bother his head with the congressional question.

It is said that the youngest pensioner of the government is James W. Crandall, aged 15 years, of Philadelphia. A year ago last March he enlisted in the navy, and soon afterwards was sent to Southern waters, where he contracted typhoid fever, which left him deaf. He draws $13 a month.

The Rev. George O. Barnes, who is better known as the Mountain Evangelist, has closed his labors for the present in Kentucky. While in Frankfort 1,249 persons were converted, thirty-three of this number were converts in the penitentiary. One week ago last Sunday these men were placed in wagons, and, surrounded with guards armed with rifles, were then taken to a river and baptised.

A dispatch from Atchinson, Kansas, announces the death of A. H. Dillon the result of wound received during the late war. He was a member of the Eight Wisconsin infantry, and had charge of the famous "Old Abe," the war eagle, during the war. He commenced immediately after the War to prosecute his pension claim, and went through the routine of proof five different times, and died without a pension.

The State Journal says there has been paid to Mr M. E. Clarke, treasurer of the Wisconsin penal and charitable institution, $46,935.51, of this amount the Institute for the Blind receives $380.05; the Northern Hospital for the Insane, $17,563; the State Hospital for the Insane, $15,686; the Industaial School for Boys, $7,500: the State Prison $2,886, and the Deaf and Dumb Institute $2,887. The following shows the condition of the treasury on the last day of June: The balance remaining in the treasury was $676,019.29. At the end of the previous month there remained in the treasury $1,214,981.67, or $537,962.38 more than at the end of the month just closed. This difference is due to the purchase of $260,000 worth of 4½ per cent. government bonds, which cost, principal, interest and premium, $297,212; the loaning of $15,000 to towns, and the draughts which have been made upon the contingent fund.

The President has vetoed the steerage which was introduced by Congressmen Deuster and Guenther. Upon this bill these gentlemen built quite a reputation, and their German friends in Milwaukee agreed to give them an enthusiastic reception at the close of Congress in honor of their zeal and success in getting the bill through Congress. But the whole business has taken a queer turn by the veto of the President which was made on Saturday. In the message he considers the main features of the bill meritorious, but the reasons which moved him to return it with his disapproval were, first, that the bill requires that immigrants "shall not be carried except on the first deck and second deck below the uppermost deck of the vessel, or the first deck below the uppermost deck, which shall have 100 cubic feet of space, and the second deck 120 cubic feet for each passenger." In his message the President explained that nearly all the new steamships have a spar deck above what was formerly the main deck, and, therefore, to deprive them of carrying passengers on the second deck, which is not now the uppermost deck, would be to make it impossible for the steamship companies to utilize a very large amount of space, and thus not only cause them great loss but diminish their carrying capacity and restrict immigration, or at least hinder it. This, the President said, he could not consent to. Then there is trouble about the provision of the bill which requires that the space between decks shall be not less than seven feet in the square. The President explained the construction of steamships to be such that this provision would render it impossible for most steamers to carry any immigrants at all. There were other provisions in the bill objectionable, and he therefore returned it, expressing the hope that it would be so amended that he could give his approval.

THOMAS CONCERTS

MILWAUKEE, Wis., July 1.—The midsummer night concerts which have been ~~in progress~~ in the Exposition building in this city for the past weeks, closed this evening. They have not proven a financial success—in fact they have been somewhat of a failure. A contract was made by Manager Torrey and Theodore Thomas to give fourteen concerts for $1,500. This was supposed at the time to be very reasonable, and no doubt was entertained of the success of the series. It appears, however, that for some reason the German population of the city, which is depended upon to come to the support of all musical enterprises, did not look with favor upon these concerts, or, at least, did not show any inclination to patronize them, hence the lack of success. It is understood that the Exposition Association loses about $3,000 by the enterprise. The association naturally feels a little hurt at the lack of appreciation shown. Everything possible was done to make the concerts pleasant. The building was finely arranged and beautifully decorated. This will be the last entertainment in the building prior to the opening of the annual exposition in September.

THE AMOUNT PAID OUT.

WASHINGTON, July 2.—The amount paid for pensions on account of the late war to March 1, 1882, is $500,781,950. It is estimated there are now on the rolls the names of 250,000 pensioners of the late war. This does not include 30,000 (estimated) service pensions on account of the war of 1812. The annual value of 250,000 of the late war pensions is $27,500,000, and of 30,000 of the war of 1812 pensioners, $2,800,000. Or the aggregate of the annual value will be $30,300,000. Estimating the disbursements for May and June, the total paid for pensions the current fisical year will not vary much from $65,000,000. On April 1, 1882, there were on file 217,162 pending claims, which, if allowed, would be entitled to arrears, estimating 17½ per cent for rejectment and $1,200 as the average arrears in each case, there would be paid, if allowed within the year, $214,990,800. There are 53,719 pending claims which were filed subsequent to the limitation imposed by the arrears act, and when allowed, the pension commences from the date of filing. Deduct 17½ per cent for rejection, and the average first payment would be one year's pension at 110 per case, or $4,806,030. If the two classes just referred to should be at once added to the roll (223,023), it would increase the annual value of pensions $24,500,000, which added to the present annual value, $30,300,000, would be $54,800,000.

PROHIBITION IN IOWA.

MCGREGOR, Ia., July 1.—The brewers of Iowa, since the adoption of the prohibitory amendment to the constitution of the State by such a large majority, are despondent. To say that they take this defeat in good part is very much from the mark. They appreciate fully the appreciate situation much better than the temperance people generally suppose. They fully understand that the amendment being adopted in the first place ruins their business, and practically destroys the value of their properties that they have spent thousands of dollars in building, and many the labor of a lifetime. There are two sides to this question. These breweries were built under the sanction of the law. The law told these men you put your money and labor into breweries, and you shall be protected. But the voice of the people expressed last Tuesday by a majority of over 40,000 is supreme, and these men must bow to this power. The main struggle in this contest has yet to be fought, and that is in the enforcement of the laws that are to be enacted to carry out the provisions of this amendment. The temperance people are undoubtedly aware that the enforcement of these laws depends entirely upon them. No one that voted against the adoption of this amendment will take any part in the enforcement of these laws. The task will be found to be a great one, and one that will require nerve and energy to accomplish.

MORMON IMMIGRANTS,

NEW YORK, July 2.—The steamship Nevada, of the Guion line, which arrived from Liverpool to-day, brought the largest party of Mormon immigrants which has come to this country in a number of years. The party which is under the charge of Missionary Irvine, numbers 923 persons, including children. Of these 657 are Scandinavians, two Hollanders, 34 returning missionaries, and 291 natives of great Britain and Ireland. There are a few others, one of whom came out as a visitor. Among the returning missionaries is Dr. Ormsby, a prominent Mormon. Missionary Irvine said that the members of his party were nearly all provided with funds, although none of them were rich. Most of them were young and in the prime of life, and they were earnest believers in the religion which they had recently embraced. The Scandinavians were nearly all farmers, but a few of them were fishermen or mechanics. Those from Great Britain were nearly all mechanics, but a few were farmers. There were about 100 children. The party will start for the West to-morrow. Another party of Mormon immigrants will arrive here on one of the Guion steamers early in September.

DIVORCE SUIT.

OSHKOSH, Wis., July 1.—Quite an interesting divorce suit is pending in the Circuit Court here, the parties thereto being prominent citizens of Menasha. The plaintiff is Kate C. Keyes and the defendant Abel Keyes, a brother of E. W. Keyes of Madison. The parties were married in Aurora, Ill., in 1880. The plaintiff alleges that since their marriage defendant has ill-treated, vilified, and threatened her, and with his sons has conspired to get rid of her without letting her get any share of his property. She alleges that Keyes since their marriage has transferred all his property to his sons, dating the deeds to a date prior to the marriage. She prays for a divorce and an injunction restraining the sons from disposing of or incumbering the property, and asking that said transfers shall be adjudged null and void as against her interests, a temporary injunction has been ordered, and the divorce suit is pending.

Mr. Riffenstein, Boston, Mass., writes: "Your SPRING BLOSSOM has cured me of dyspepsia, of four (4) years standing. I have regained my normal appetite, can sleep well and feel like a new man." Price 50 cents, trial bottles 10 cents. Sold by A. J. Roberts and F. Sherer & Co.

A PROSPECTIVE LYNCHING

LANCASTER, July 2.—The Sisley trial continued Saturday with unabated interest. The examination of Richard Pegg was resumed but nothing new was leicited Thomas Welch and Matthew Lamb, also members of the charivari company, were examined, and their testimony was substantially the same as Pegg's. Mrs. Lester, Mrs. J. Erdee and Mrs. Calloway, wives of the neighbors, were examined, and testified as to the condition of the body when found and the actions of Sisley and the Hamilton family during the time they were at the house. The polonaize worn by the deceased was burned off down to the waist and the flesh on the breast and arms was burned to a crisp, and one bullet hole was visible. Above the corset there were no bruises or indications of rough handling of the body sworn to. One of the women said that Sisley once said, "My God! what have I done?" This is one of the speeches that is often repeated and causes suspicion, but it does not seem to have the application unfriendly persons give it. An adjournment was taken till next Wednesday. It is rumored that a party of Sisley's neighbors intend to take the law in their own hands providing Sisley is not bound over, and threaten to lynch him.

MILTON COLLEGE.

On Friday evening, June 23, Dr. Hodge of Janesville, delivered a sermon in college chapel under the auspices of the "Y. M. C. A." It was a plain, impressive, picture of the lowly character of the mission work of Christians. Text, Matt. 10: 24-25. "The disciple is not above his master, nor the servant above his lord. It is enough for the disciple that he be as his master, and the servant as his lord."

On Saturday evening, June 24, Rev. T. J. Macmurray lectured at College chapel, under the auspices of the Iduna and Philomathean Lyceums. His subject was "Hobbies and their Riders." The weather being unfavorable, the attendance was small. The lecture had but little merit.

The Baccalaureate sermon was delivered on Sunday evening in College chapel by President T R. Williams. Text, "Search the scriptures." The study of the bible was recommended on the ground that it is the revelation of God to man, and the authorative source of true morality and religious instruction, and that all noble sentiment, charity, self-sacrifice, and eminent heroism is due to its teachings.

THE OROPHILIAN LYCEUM.

This Lyceum held its annual public session in College chapel on Monday evening, June 26.

The music for the occasion was furnished by Misses Tanner and Wheeler, and Messrs. Babcock and Dunn. The pieces were well selected and rendered with good effect.

W. D. Thomas delivered an oration on "The educational value of classical studies." The composition was well-wrought and deeply ingrained tissue of argument in support of classical studies. The delivery was simple, discriminating and forcible.

"American Politics," was the subject of an oration by John Cunningham. This was Mr. Cunningham's first public effort. From the credit he won it is safe to predict it will not be his last. His analysis of causes and distinctions was clear and fundamental; his rhetoric good. His delivery was defective, but not unacceptable.

C. R. Boss recited "The Last Hymn" in fair Amateur style. The piece is a difficult one.

C. J. Rollis' oration, entitled "Might vs. Right," was a somewhat eloquent plea for the better treatment of the American Indians at the hands of the whites.

"The Orphilian Standard" was edited and by Sears McHenry. The matter, and manner of presentations, were in good, easy style and it was received with favor.

The address by Prof. L. Heritage was an ingenious analysis of the motives that lead people to inquire after knowledge. It was 24 carats fine. His thesis was, "Life is more than meat,"

The audience numbered about 175. Proceeds $30.

MID-DAY CONCERT OF THE MILTON CHORAL SOCIETY JUNE 27.

That we are a growing people is attested by the enthusiasm of this mid-day concert. Mr. N. Wardner Williams is a most devoted and conscencious teacher. As a conductor of "Choral Union," has been his aim to cultivate the best and purest music; and to represent it in its broadest and fullest types. Now that he has called out, on a summer day and amid storm, a house which paid him fifty-five solid dollars for the privilege of attention and came away well pleased;—now that he has rendered Mendelssohn's "Athalie" to the satisfied ears of a Milton audience he should count his work a grand success and be encouraged to his best efforts in the future. Let us put upon him and the "Society" the inspiration of the grand chorus of Athalie;—

"Heaven and earth display
God's glory is unbounded;
O, praise ye Him in song,
His wondrous love proclaim!"

The Iduna Lyceum and Philomathean Society held their joint public session on Tuesday evening, June 27. The audience filled and crowded the chapel. The sextette advertised on the programme failed to appear. Excellent music, however, was furnished by Prof. N. Wardner Williams, Misses M. J. Haven, and M. D. Burdick, Mrs. W. P. Clarke, Mrs. Hatheway, of Whitewater, and Miss Gove of Waukesha.

The subject of the oration by C. B. Hull was not stated on the programme. This is due to the fact that it was not handed in for criticism, till within three days of the session. He was prompted several times by one who had his manuscript, and so came through without the slightest embarrassment. He presented a cheap list of platitudes on the fall and redemption of man.

"The Relief of Lucknow" was rendered by Miss M. J. Henry with fine and effective expression.

C. M. Post presented an oration entitled, "Things are not what they seem." This oration had merit, in that it showed hues of native thought, and evidence of careful preparation. The rendering was fair.

Miss N. L. Green's oration, entitled "Rescript," was in good rhetoric. Her presentation was reasonably commendable. Out of respect to the dictionary she should accent the word 'misconstrue' on the penult. Out of respect to good taste she should not say Tom Paine for Thomas Paine.

"Patriotism," was the subject of an oration by W. B. Millar. His thought was well brought out by the method of contrasts. His elocution was clear and acceptable.

Miss Dr. R. A. Graham presented a well written paper on "Hygienic Medicine." She was not at home on the stage and failed to command the attention of her audience.

COMMENCEMENT DAY JUNE 28.

At ten oclock the exercises of the graduating class were opened on the campus, where the staging, seats, and shades had been arrainged. A shower came up in the midst of the first oration, and all repaired as quickly as possible to the S. D. B. church. The windows were taken out and the building was filled to the overflowing. Mr. D. F. Brown, of Milton, again took the stage, and delivered his oration on "Nihilism." This oration showed original researching, and was set forth with good elocution and effect.

Amy S. West, of Utica, acquitted herself well. Her subject was "Use Your Talent."

Wm. Fowlie, of Sheridan, did capitally. His oration was entitled "Force of an Idea."

Miss Abbie P. Burdick, of Milton, spoke on the "Influence of Want." Her subject was well developed, and presented with distinctness.

Thomas J. Fowlie, of Sheridan, took the house by the ears on "Choice of a Profession." He delivered his pointed matter with appropriate vigor.

"Obligations of Youth," was Louisa S. Thompson's theme. She presented her oration with a gentle grace becoming to her person and character.

The oration by Edith A. Merrifield, of Fulton, was on "William Cullen Bryant." It was well composed, and its rendering gave good satisfaction.

The last oration, entitled "The Domain of Knowledge," and the Valedictory, were presented by George M. Henderson, of Milton. This oration met with a favorable reception and comment, and will be published in full in the next issue of the College Journal.

The degree of Bachelor of Science was conferred on Datus F. Brown, and George M. Henderson. The degree of Master of Arts was conferred on J. Nelson Humphrey, of Whitewater. The Teacher's Diploma was awas awarded to Amy S. West, Wm., Fowlie, Abbie P. Burdick, Thos. J. Fowlie, Louisa S. Thompson and Edith A. Merrifield.

Excellent music was at intervals by the Milton Cornet Band. The audience paid remarkably good attention throught the exercises.

ALUMNI DINNER,

This dinner was proveded by the lady friends of Milton College, and was free to all the old students of the Institution. After dinner the Alumni Association listened to the report of their secretary and attended to some business.

Prof. L. Heritage was elected president for the coming year, George M. Henderson vice president, Datus F. Brown secretary.

At 3 o'clock th the Alumni took the platform on the campus. Speeches were made by Prof. Millar, Rev. O. U. Whitford, Prof. Wardner Williams, Prof. L. Heritage and Dr. T. R. Williams. Hon. W. C. Whitford read an able paper on what education does for persons.

At near 5 o'clock the class of 1882 took the stage and presented some well prepared and pithy exercises which pleased and held in good attention the large audience till six o'clock.

The Senior's concert in the evening was a grand success. The readings by Miss Clara M. Dunn was a notably attractive feature. After the concert many went to the chapel, where refreshments and social intercourse were enjoyed till the mid-night hour.

A Village Beauty's Fortune.

Many years ago a young man made his appearance in Stratford, Conn., and passed a few weeks at the tavern which then existed to afford shelter to stage-coach passengers. Whence he came and what was his business no one could guess. Directly opposite the tavern stood a small cottage and forge of a blacksmith named Folsom. He had a daughter who was the beauty of the village, and it was her fortune to capture the heart of the young stranger. He told his love, said he was traveling incog., but in confidence gave her his real name, saying he was heir to a large fortune. She returned his love, and they were married a few weeks after.

The stranger told his wife they must visit New Orleans. He did so, and the gossips of the town made the young wife unhappy by disagreeable hints and jeers. In a few weeks he returned; but before a week had elapsed he received a large budget of letters, and told his wife he must at once return to England, and must go alone. He took his departure, and the gossips had another glorious opportunity to make a confiding woman wretched. To all but herself it was a regular case of desertion. The wife became a mother, and for two years lived in silence and hope. At the end of that time a letter was received by the Stratford beauty from her husband, directing her to go at once to New York with her child, taking nothing with her but the clothes she wore, and embark in a ship for her home in England.

On her arrival in New York she found a vessel splendidly furnished with every luxury and convenience for her comfort, and two servants ready to obey every wish she might express. The ship duly arrived in England, and the Stratford girl became mistress of a mansion, and as the wife of a baronet was saluted as Lady Samuel Stirling. On the death of her husband, many years ago, the Stratford boy succeeded to the title and wealth of his father, and in the last edition of "Peerage and Baronetage" he is spoken of as the issue of "Miss Folsom, of Stratford, N. A."

Storm Science.

All atmospheric conditions, and notably storms, are controlled by unvarying laws that are easily comprehended and susceptible of application by any intelligent observer, who, noting the conditions that exist, may reason therefrom to the conditions that must ensue. In other words, by understanding the laws of meteorology and considering the observations daily reported in the newspapers, one may make his own forecasts one, two, and even three days in advance, the value of which will depend only on the carefulness of his predictions. It must be understood, in the first place, that a storm is not of local origin. For instance, a storm does not form here at the same time another is forming at Cairo, Omaha, Buffalo, or Duluth. This is a popular error, and the cause of many delusions. On the contrary, ninety-nine out of every hundred storms in the United States originate on the arid plains east of the Rocky Mountains, and from there move eastward. The process of the origin of a storm, now well understood, consists of the formation of a "storm center," or area of low barometer, terms which are practically synonymous.

The atmosphere is a varying depository of sun-heat acquired directly from the sun's rays and from the heated surface of the earth. On the barren and sandy plains this acquisition of heat is augmented by the more powerful reflection of the sand, and presently a body of air, many miles in circumference, will become super-charged with heat, which induces a greater absorption of moisture from the earth's surface and surrounding atmosphere. This heated body of air, true to that law which causes the lighter heated atmosphere to ascend (nowhere better illustrated than at the ordinary chimney,) commences to rise; other air rushes in below, which encountering the same heating surfaces, is in turn heated, rises, and gives place continuously to other air. This is a storm center, and the country over which this operation is going on is an area of low barometer (and high thermometer,) called so from the fact that the atmosphere, having an ascensive motion, counteracts in a measure its downward pressure, and for other minor reasons not necessary to detail. This rising body of air, highly charged with vapor (another name for moisture) ascends until it passes the dew-point, which is the point where the moisture in the atmosphere will begin to resolve itself again into water and descend in rain. This operation of the condensation of moisture from vapor into water is noticeable on the outside of a pitcher of ice-water, on the water-pipes in houses, or on any metallic surface in a damp house where there is no fire.

The ascending body of atmosphere at each point of its ascent encounters colder air, and the latent heat, released by the condensation of vapor augmenting its temperature, its progress upward is increased instead of dimished, until finally reaching the higher strata of air, it spreads outward, on top as it were, piling up, if the expression may be used, and so deepening the atmosphere at the circumference of the storm, which, together with the fact that the atmosphere has a slightly onward motion at the the same point, creates a circle of high barometer, or great air pressure outside the storm.

The operation of condensation of moisture manifests itself to the eye by the formation of clouds, which is an intermediate stage between vapor and water.

The atmospheric disturbance outlined is a storm, and no sooner is it formed than it begins to move eastward. All well-developed storms in the United States move from west to east, deflecting slightly to the north. This northward deflection is more noticeable in winter, almost disappearing in summer. Occasionally storms depart from their eastward course and move directly north, but as these are freaks, and of rare occurrence, they cannot be said to be more than equivalent to a railway train getting off the track owing to some unnatural condition of, or obstruction on, the track, and can rarely be predicted, but must be taken into consideration as possible contingencies. Storms vary in circumference and shape. In Europe they are more nearly round than in America, where they are of a more irregular, oval form. In size they vary from a diameter of a few miles to those that reach from the gulf to beyond the lakes.

It will be observed that there are two points to be considered in predicting a storm. First, the position of the storm, and second, its rate of progress. Every reader of the Times will observe in this and in all the preceding editions of this paper a table of the general observations made throughout the country by the signal service. It will be observed that these stations are well distributed throughout the West. Now, suppose a storm center formed yesterday at Dodge City, Kan., it would be visible in the table through the barometer, rainfall, clouds, etc. For example, the barometer falling in such an event would show, perhaps, 29.80; the thermometer would indicate a high temperature; the weather would be cloudy, and, perhaps; more or less rainfall would be reported. We would have an incipient storm, the extent of which, however, it is too early to predict. Another day's reading of the table will probably show that there is a low barometer and that a storm prevails at Leavenworth; a high barometer is observed at Des Moines and Las Animas, points in front of and behind the storm; that is to say, the area of low barometer, or the storm center, would be at Leavenworth, while the area of high barometer which, as shown, always surrounds a storm, would be at Des Moines in front, at Las Animas in the rear, at St. Paul on the north and Little Rock on the south. Another day would advance the storm center to Chicago, carrying forward the surrounding high barometer on its circumference. Thence it would move forward, perhaps to the Atlantic, and possibly across the ocean. These statements—and they seem almost incredible to the uninformed—are not only statements of facts which are daily demonstrated, but are susceptible of test. Anyone who knows there is a storm at Dodge City, that it will, in all probability, move eastward at the rate of, say, twenty-five miles an hour, and knows his own distance from Dodge City, can predict the arrival of the storm just as the arrival of a friend coming east on a train at Dodge City, though of course not so conclusively. Or again, the storm is moving eastward from Dodge City at the rate of twenty-five miles an hour; in twenty-four hours it will be six hundred miles farther east; in two days, twelve hundred, and so on. As has been said, there are conditions which affect the progress and course of a storm, but these re of so complicated a character that instead of aiding in the education of the subject they would tend rather to confuse. The general principles here laid down are simple and easy of application by anyone who will take the time for what may be made a useful as well as an extremely interesting diversion.

For practical work let the amateur observer mark with his pencil on a map of the United States the barometer recorded on the table. Then let him draw lines from all the low barometers to each other, say a line for each tenth of an inch on the barometer. He will probably find that he will have before him a storm-center partially surrounded by a belt of high barometer. This is the weather map as made by the officer at Washington. Never mind the wind nor thermometer, nor other observations at the beginning. The use and significance of other observations than the barometer may be acquired as the student progresses. From this map the amateur can make his own forecasts, and, turning at once to the signal-service forecasts annexed to the table, see how well he reasons and note the result of each prediction.

Perhaps the most advanced indication of a storm is a rapid and great elevation of the barometer. There have been shown the use and fact of a high barometer area encircling a storm, and that the storm moves eastward. It, therefore, follows that the area of high barometer will reach a locality perhaps twelve to twenty-four hours in advance of the storm. There is no better "sign" so far ahead of a storm yet discovered, for the first condition known to arise at a point about to be visited by a storm is confided to the atmosphere in a manner which the barometer most clearly reveals. Of course the atmospheric condition that thus affects the barometer may, and does have other manifestations, but they are intangible and not uniform in their occurrence.—Chicago Times.

Cruikshank's Bank Note.

In the year 1811 when Gillray began to incapacitate himself for work by drinking, it was already apparent that there was a young man in the field capable, if he chose, of taking his place. George Cruikshank was proving himself to be a caricaturist of marvelous fertility, energy, keen wit and—a thing of more consequence than all—a man who put his heart and faith into his work. No more striking evidence of these qualities as developed in the earlier part of his life is to be found than that afforded by his famous "Bank Note not to be Imitated," of which the book before us contains an admirable fac simile. His own account of it gives a key for explaining some of the most mysterious episodes in his later life.

He says: "At that time (1817 or 1818) I resided in Dorset Street, Salisbury-Square, Fleet Street and had occasion to go early one morning to a house near the Bank of England; and, in returning home, between eight and nine o'clock, down Ludgate Hill, and, seeing a number of persons looking up the Old Bailey, I looked that way myself, and saw several human beings hanging on the gibbet opposite Newgate Prison, and to my horror, two of these were women; and upon inquiring what these women had been hanged for, was informed that it was for passing forged £1 notes. * * After witnessing this scene I went home, and in ten minutes designed and made a sketch of this 'bank note not to be imitated.'" The border of the note is of gyves and fetters, the £ is made of twisted rope. The design is twelve criminals hanging dead on one gallows, and the legend is: "I promise to perform Ad Lib. During the issue of Bank Notes Easily Imitated, and Until the Resumption of Cash Payments or the Abolition of the Punishment of Death. For the Governor and Company of the Bank of England —J. Ketch." When this was displayed in Hone's window, says Cruikshank, it created a great sensation, and the people gathered round his house in such numbers that the Lord Mayor had to send the city police (of that day) to disperse the crowd. The Bank directors held a meeting immediately on the subject, and after that they issued no more £1 notes, and so there was no more hanging for passing forged £1 notes; not only that, but ultimately no hanging even for forgery. After this Sir Robert Peel got a bill passed in Parliment for the resumption of Cash Payments. After this he revised the Penal Code, and after that there was not any more hanging or punishments of death for minor offenses. Later on we find him saying So the final effect of my note was to stop hanging for all minor offenses. Here we have the revelation of the man who then and afterwards claimed to have written or suggested the most popular works of Dickens or Ainsworth that he had illustrated, and who seldom, as Mr. Jerold observes, suggested a peg that he did not afterwards claim everything that was hung upon it. He was so thoroughly heart and soul in whatever he did, that he, so to speak, fought every battle as if he were the only combatant on his side. It is but one step from that to ignoring every one else's share in the victory.—London Standard.

Aim Higher.

It is no difference whether the farmer is breeding fine stock, keeping dairy cows, or devoting his farm to some varieties of grains, he should aim to improve. Starting with the highest type of stock or seed, it should be his constant effort to improve upon whatever he produces every year. He should establish a pretty high ideal, and select every year more perfect specimens of stock and grain. There is no branch of agriculture perfect yet, and the highest specimens of it always pay the best. Even with grain and vegetables there is a wide field for improvement, and he who is able to put on the market a better article than any of his neighbors, can always command a much higher price. It is easy to get a good name, and men will travel far to obtain their seed of him at greatly enhanced prices. It pays largely to have superior products. This can be obtained at little comparative cost, even in the breeding of fine stock. The best class of male animals, no matter how high the price, cost but little in comparison to the value of his produce. Aim higher in all departments of the farm. No matter how insignificant the item raised, let it be of a superior quality of its kind. Nowhere is there more room for improvement than in all departments of the farm.—Iowa Register.

—The editor of a Boston newspaper wrote a letter to an out-of-town correspondent, telling him that unless he improved his handwriting he might cease his connection with the paper. He had to pay his compositors by the hour, he said, for setting up the correspondent's letters. In a day or two the editor's letter came back directed to the office, with the following indorsement from the correspondent: "I received this from some one in your office. Will somebody that can write a legible hand please inform me whom it is from and what it is all about?"

—Under certain conditions flour becomes as explosive as gunpowder, but the only draw-back is that you can't point a barrel of it in fun at any of your dear friends and have it go off at the right instant.—Detroit Free Press.

The Zuni Pueblo.

High up on the western slope of the Sierra Madre, in New Mexico, nearly a mile and a half above the sea level, and but a few miles beyond the divide, where scanty waters begin their timid and uncertain way down toward the Pacific, stands ancient Zuni, the father of the pueblos. When Coronado made his famous march into the unknown north, the Zunis, or Shi-wi-nas, as they call themselves, were the first, and also the most numerous and powerful, of the pueblo people encountered by him. Their towns covered a great territory, almost deserving the name of "kingdom"—term so lavishly and loosly used by Coronado and his contemporary explorers. Oppression and pestilence have so diminished their numbers, and their strict exclusiveness has so impoverished their physical condition, that the once mighty nation has now been reduced to a handful of people. These inhabit a single pueblo. But the country around is dotted with ruined towns upon whose walls is graven the symbol of the shi-wi-na, the sacred water-spider, whose figure forms the Zuni coat of arms. Here, surrounded by the forsaken homes of their kindred and ancestry—crumbling heaps which in antiquity rival the storied stones of the Old World—the Zunis live as their fathers lived, and jealously treasure their proud history.

Zuni is still the largest of the pueblos of New Mexico and Arizona, and is looked up to by the others, which differ entirely in language, with the veneration and homage belonging to the elder member of their family, the source whence come their religion and institutions. By the census of 1880, under an accurate count, the population of Zuni numbered 1,602, nearly 500 more than that of Isleta, the next pueblo in size. Therefore it is still a considerable town. It is only a few years since the Zunis numbered several thousand, but an epidemic of the small-pox decimated them terribly.

With the exception of the Moquis and the Java Supais, or Ku'h-nis, in Arizona—the latter an almost unknown pueblo in Cataract Creek Canon, one of the "box canons" of the Colorado—the Zunis are the most isolated of all the pueblo tribes. They have therefore been little influenced by contact either with Spanish or Anglo-American civilization, and to-day live substantially the life they led when Coronado first started out in search of the seven cities of Cibola. The river pueblos, as they are called—those ranging along the Rio Grande from Taos to Isleta—have monopolized the attention of travelers and writers, being the most convenient of access. But these, surrounded by the towns of the Mexicans on every hand, and latterly having come in contact with the more pushing American, who leaves his own indelible impress upon all whom he meets, they have naturally been materially influenced by the alien life around them, and their manners have been considerably changed thereby.

However good a copy may be, however faithful as a reproduction, the most of us have a strong preference for originals. So Zuni, as the oldest of the pueblo families, as the father of their Kultur, as the Germans would say, and possessing the most distinctive characteristics, is decidedly the representative pueblo of New Mexico.—Sylvester Baxter, in Harper's Magazine.

TUTT'S PILLS

A DISORDERED LIVER IS THE BANE

of the present generation. It is for the Cure of this disease and its attendants, SICK-HEADACHE, BILIOUSNESS, DYSPEPSIA, CONSTIPATION, PILES, etc., that TUTT'S PILLS have gained a world-wide reputation. No Remedy has ever been discovered that acts so gently on the digestive organs, giving them vigor to assimilate food. As a natural result, the Nervous System is Braced, the Muscles are Developed, and the Body Robust.

Chills and Fever.

E. RIVAL, a Planter at Bayou Sara, La., says: My plantation is in a malarial district. For several years I could not make half a crop on account of bilious diseases and chills. I was nearly discouraged when I began the use of TUTT'S PILLS. The result was marvelous: my laborers soon became hearty and robust, and I have had no further trouble.

They relieve the engorged Liver, cleanse the Blood from poisonous humors, and cause the bowels to act naturally, without which no one can feel well.

Try this remedy fairly, and you will gain a healthy Digestion, Vigorous Body, Pure Blood, Strong Nerves, and a Sound Liver. Price, 25 Cents. Office, 35 Murray St., N. Y.

Choosing a Profession.

A question which becomes more important every year is that which concerns the education of young men for the professions. When it is finally solved, and set at rest, a great good will have been done to the public, and many youths will be kept from feeling in their manhood the heartburnings and the sense of failure in their lives from which so many are now suffering. It is useless to disguise the fact that the dignity of manual labor, guided by the intelligence of special learning, is not generally believed in. An excuse for this lack of faith is drawn from the argument that as mechanical trades are so subdivided now that a young man after learning one branch rarely is given the opportunity to learn another, and that, having but little need to use his brain in his work, he usually becomes a sort of animated machine. But is there a controlling reason why a mechanic should thus lose his power—assuming, of course, that he has started with a fair supply of intelligence and energy? That there is not is shown by the fact that some men with no other opportunities than their fellows, by using their eyes and wits, learn every branch of their trades, and thereby procure commanding positions. For instance in the pressroom of a newspaper of this city there is one man who not only can manage a complicated press, but can take it apart and put it together, and repair it if it gets out of order. Yet he has had no special advantages over the men whom he directs as a foreman. He has looked and learned, and he is now highly paid for the trouble he took to inform himself. It seems wrong, then, to assert that an energetic, intelligent boy will have no chance to rise in a trade. The thing to ascertain in the beginning is the trade for which he is naturally fitted. This is hard to ascertain, and most parents do not make the attempt. They put their boys into any clerical position that is open to them, or they decide long in advance that the youths shall be clergymen, physicians, or lawyers. In this way many men have been put into professions for which they have no aptitude, and so struggle on and fail. The question which arises is: Could not this evil be overcome by making it less easy to become a professional man? Would not many fathers and mothers in moderate circumstances pause and reflect if they knew it would cost much time and money to make doctors, or lawyers, or clergymen of their sons? But, leaving this question one side, is it right that any ordinary man may obtain permission to practice upon the public health or the public rights after nominally studying medicine or law for two years? As a matter of fact students do not attend the medical or law schools for half that period. Earnest physicians and lawyers who love their professions think profoundly upon this question, and are of the opinion that not only should the periods of study be longer but that no man should be admitted to study unless he has had a collegiate education, or, lacking that, is able to pass an examination so as to show that he has a good foundation for special learning. Ignoramuses would not then be so common in the professions. If only fit persons are given the right of way into the professions the unfit will find places suited to them, for fond and poor parents will be forced to study the characteristics of their children before marking out careers for them.—N. Y. Times.

Some Chinese Manners and Customs.

It has been well said that the everyday customs and manners of the Chinese are diametrically opposed to what we are familiar with. In a country where, as Wingrove Cook says, "the roses have no fragance and the women no petticoats; where the laborer has no Sabbath, and the Magistrate no sense of honor; where the needle points to the South, and the sign of being puzzled is to scratch the antipodes of the head; where the place of honor is on the left hand, and the seat of intelligence is in the stomach; where to take off your hat is an insolent gesture, and to wear white garment is to put yourself in mourning," it would be difficult perhaps to find many customs which are common with us. It is stated that, as the needle of the Chinese compass points toward the South, so also every house in China, which is at all pretentious, faces the same way as well as the state seats in all the reception rooms. The Chinese at home, as abroad for the most part, are industrious and frugal; the poorer classes live almost entirely on rice and vegetables sometimes adding small pieces of fish and meat. They are accustomed to living in crowded apartments, and their clothing is usually but a small item in the way of expenditure; although China is vast as to territory, there are many who live, near the large cities, in boats on the neighboring rivers and lakes.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

The Underground Cypress Trees of Delaware.

Cypress Swamp, in the lower end of this State, is a place of interest at any time.

Fires occur frequently, and are caused by the carelessness of some one. The peculiar name of Cypress Swamp at these times is better under understood. For ten or fifteen feet below the surface the devouring element burrows, finding everywhere material upon which to feed. The soil is but decayed vegetable matter accumulated through centuries. Sometimes those fires insiduously eat their way beneath the fields of corn which grow here and there on the edge of the swamp, and frequently the rural inhabitant, upon awakening in the morning, sees these fields scalloped with holes big enough in some places to comfortably take in his granary.

The swamp is a mystery. At a time, with regard to which even tradition is silent, it had been a basin—a basin of considerable width and depth—for the Indians had sat on its bottom, fed upon clams and oysters, and indolently smoked pipes in the shade of the cypress.

The cypresses which had shaded these aboriginal epicures many centuries ago now lie, or did years ago, before the shingle hunter came into the swamp, a fallen forest, with fifteen feet of swamp, and acres of trees of another age growing thriftily above it. In its depths creeks of Indian River Bay find source, and the waters, dark with the soakings of vegetable matter, and carried by these on the one side into the Atlantic Ocean, and by the Pocomoke River on the other side into the Chesapeake Bay. The theory is that the streams of water which are now mere creeks were the channels up which elements in the process of gradual formation were carried and deposited. The forest of cypress timber gradually gave way until the trees became completely buried. This matter, which in time filled up the basin, has served to preserve the cypress.

Very few of them, however, lie buried; for almost a century shingle hunters have thrived in the swamp. Among the many things of interest I saw were the cabins of these men. The shingle-hunting industry is now almost extinct.

Those engaged in the business would go into the swamp and work there for weeks. In dry weather, such as that of last summer, the soil of the swamp would crack in many places, and, with the instinct which experience gave, the hunters would search for these fissures. Every crack indicated a spot where was buried cypress timber. After the tree had been resurrected, the rivers would come, and in a very short time the once-buried trunk would be converted into a large pile of shingles, which were then more profitable than now.

Almost all the old buildings in Sussex County are roofed with these, and many thousands were shipped to other States. Nothing now remains of this once lucrative business but the cabins in the swamp and a few gray-haired rustics living hereabouts who made their dollars in this way.—Wilmington News.

A Newport Speculation.

In 1850 Wm. Beach Lawrence purchased of George Armstrong and others the Ochre Point property, sixty acres, for $12,000. Once afterward, when hard up for ready money, Governor Lawrence offered to sell the property for $14,000, and again for $20,000, but he found no purchasers. In 1862 the Governor sold a house lot off this property to R. M. Staigg for $2,308.87. Since that time the following sales of land from off the Lawrence estate have been made: To Marshal Woods, for $9,825.63, a small tract; to Professor Fairman Rodgers, three acres, for $35,795; to the same party, another lot for $11,400; to Mrs. Geo. H. Pendleton, a lot, for $10,900; to Pierre Lorillard, ten acres, for $96,147; to the same party, a lot, for $10,000; to Mrs. Acosty, a lot, for $10,140; to Mrs. O'Donnell, a lot, for $10,140; to Professor W. Shields, a lot, for $15,000; to Miss Catharine L. Wolfe, thirteen acres and homestead, for $492,000; to General H. J. Van Allen, ten acres, for $98,942.50; to Miss Julia Rhineland, of New York, a four-acre lot, for $60,000. Thus, from a $12,000 purchase the sum of $560,649.97 has been realized. The difference between the two sums represent the rise in value of the property in thirty years. In 1830 the whole property was sold for $465.—Boston Post.

A CORRESPONDENT at Denver says a sewing machine agent, on entering the grounds of a private residence, was met by the pet watch dog of the landlady and compelled to skip out at a lively rate. Nothing daunted, the agent started down town and borrowed a Colt's navy pistol from a friend, returned, put five bullets in the pet dog, and then went in and sold the landlady a $60 machine.

John Brown and Frederick Douglass.

There is no more interesting part of Douglass' book than that which describes his connection with John Brown. When they first met in Rochester, Brown was a respectable and prosperous merchant, who owned a large brick store on one of the principal streets. After seeing the store Douglass expected that the house would be proportionately fine. On the contrary, it was a small wooden building on a back street, and the inside was plainer than the outside. Its furniture "would have satisfied a Spartan," and there was an "air of plainness about it that almost suggested destitution." The first meal Douglass ate there was called "tea," but it consisted of "beef soup, cabbage and potatoes." The table was "innocent of paint, veneering, varnish or table-cloth," and the mother and daughter cooked the meals and did the waiting. The master of this household "fulfilled St. Paul's idea of the head of the family. His wife believed in him, and his children observed him with reverence."

Douglass describes Brown as his face is known to us through the illustrated papers of those stormy days: "In person he was lean, strong, sinewy, of the best New England mold, built for times of trouble and fitted to grapple with the flintiest hardships, clad in plain, American woolen, shod in boots of cowhide leather, and wearing a cravat of the same substantial material; under six feet high, less than one hundred and fifty pounds in weight, age about fifty, he presented a figure straight and symmetrical as a mountain pine. His bearing was singularly impressive. His head was not large, but compact and high. His hair was coarse, strong, slightly gray and closely trimmed, and grew low on his forehead. His face was smoothly shaved, and revealed a strong, square mouth, supported by a broad, prominent chin. His eyes were bluish gray, and in conversation they were full of light and fire. When on the street he moved with a long, springing, race-horse step, absorbed by his own reflections, neither seeking nor shunning observation."

After tea Brown cautiously approached the subject that was nearest his heart—the freeing of the slaves—and he laid his plan before Douglass. It was a bold one, and one that would send him down the pages of history either as a murderer or a martyr. He was ready to take his life in his hand, and all the money he had saved by living in the most economical manner was to be devoted to the cause. "I can but be killed," he said.—Philadelphia Times.

Spectators at Fires.

There is a fascination in running to fires. Hardly a man or boy lives who has not at some time been moved to enthusiasm by the sound of an alarm or by the prospect of standing within easy reach of a burning building. In going to a fire the chance attendants do not contemplate helping the people whose houses or goods may be in danger of combustion. They want to see the spectacle, and to this end they are willing to put themselves to much inconvenience. They will stand in a condition of condensed pack to which the state of the most crowded street car is by comparison elegant elbow-room. They will content to be pushed by policemen, run into by fire-engines, robbed by pickpockets or forced into gutters of running water. Sometimes all this becomes a very expensive mode of sight-seeing. A notable instance of disappointment in this respect occurred at a New York fire. A large party of spectators had been crowded into a very narrow street in such a manner that they could not by any possibility have enjoyed a view of the blaze unless provided with spy-glasses so constructed as to admit of looking around corners. While stretching their necks in order to try to overcome this untoward condition of affairs a very large hose suddenly burst in their midst. The water was immediately distributed over the bystanders in liberal profusion. Their retreat was precipitate. One of the results of this watering of the people will be that some of the watered ones will forever hereafter abandon the practice of going to fires in the capacity of spectators where they are not needed.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE—WHEREAS, Wm. M. Steele and Clarinda P. Steele, his wife, of the city of Janesville, Rock county, Wisconsin, mortgagors, duly executed and delivered to George M. Steele, mortgagee, a mortgage bearing date February 8th, 1881, which was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds, of the county of Rock, in the State of Wisconsin, on the 25th day of February, 1881, at three o'clock in the afternoon, in Volume 12, of mortgages, at page 206, on which mortgage there is due and unpaid at the date hereof the sum of fourteen hundred and twenty ($1420) dollars principal, and the further sum of eight hundred and seventy-eight and 3-100 ($878.03) dollars interest, at 7 per cent, making a total of twenty-two hundred and ninety-eight 3-100 ($2298 03-100) dollars due and unpaid upon the said mortgage at date hereof. And

WHEREAS, Default has been made in the payment of the debt secured by the said mortgage according to the condition thereof as set forth in said mortgage and no action has been commenced to recover the debt secured by the said mortgage or any part thereof. And

WHEREAS, The said mortgage and the debt secured thereby were afterwards, to-wit on 17th day of June, 1882, by an instrument in writing bearing date June 17, 1882, for a valuable consideration by said mortgagor, George M. Steele, duly assigned to Walter L. Steele, of Tigerton, Wisconsin, who is now the owner and holder thereof; and the said assignment duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for said Rock County, at 8 o'clock and fifty-five minutes in the forenoon of July 1, 1882, in Vol. 40 of Miscellany, page 483. Now therefore, notice is hereby given that in pursuance of the Statute in such cases made and provided, and by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the said mortgaged premises hereinafter described, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to raise the sum of money necessary to satisfy the amount due on the said mortgage at the date of this notice of sale, with interest and the costs and expenses allowed by law, at public auction to the highest bidder

On Wednesday, the 23rd day of August, A. D. 1882, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, on the sidewalk in front of the Postoffice building, at the city of Janesville, in the said County of Rock, State of Wisconsin, by the Sheriff or Deputy Sheriff of said county.

The following is a description of the mortgaged premises, so as aforesaid to be sold substantially as they are contained in the said mortgage: A part of the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of section thirty-five (35) in town three (3) north range twelve (12) east, county of Rock, State of Wisconsin, comprising ten (10) acres of land and bounded as follows: beginning at the northwest corner of land once owned by O. P. Robinson, thence south sixty-six and two-thirds (66⅔) rods to land once owned by M. A. Lovejoy, thence west twenty-four (24) rods, thence north sixty-six and two-thirds (66⅔) rods, thence east twenty-four rods (24) rods to place of beginning, being the premises owned and occupied by the late Wm. M Steele at the time of his death.—Dated July 1st, 1882.

—Mr. Charles F. Resseguie, chief clerk in the general superintendent's office of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railway, in Chicago, is in the city visiting his parents. There are a great many in Janesville who will give him a hearty welcome and congratulate him on his promotion last winter. He has rightfully earned the honors that have been bestowed upon him.

—The Rev. Father John P. Moran, O. S. D., who recently graduated at St. Josephs College, in Ohio, came to the city on Saturday, and preached in St. Patrick's church yesterday morning at half-past ten o'clock mass. He will soon leave for New York city, and will officiate at St. Vincent Farrer, a prominent church located on Lexington avenue, between 66th and 65th streets. He is now on his way to Lafayette county, the place of his birth, where he will visit relatives and friends.

The Visiting Military.

The two Chicago military companies, to take part in to-morrow's parade, arrived on the 12:55 train this afternoon. The train was a half hour late, and the large crowd present was kept waiting for that length of time. The guests of the city are Companies B and C of the Second Regiment I. N. G., and number including the Evanston military band, eighty-one persons, officered as follows:

Battalion commander acting Major Captain A. H. Wills. of Co., B; company B. officers, First Lieutenant Frank Lashor; Second Lieutenant James H. Bassett. Company C—Captain C. H. Boyer; First Lieutenant Vanzowell; Second Lieutenant Fred Billings. Col. W. H. Thompson of the Second Regiment accompanies the battalion as an honored guest. The visitors were received at the depot by the Janesville Guards under Capt. H. A. Smith twenty-seven members turning out for the occasion, with Adjutant Newman on horseback.

The military formed into line with Adjutant Newman in the lead followed by the Evanston Band, the Guards and then the visitors. The companies marched down Milwaukee street, followed, by crowds of admiring people, to the Guards' armory, where they disbanded and the visitors sought their quarters at the Myers house.

Between fifteen and twenty additional men are expected to join companies B and C to-night, having promised to come on the evening train. The afternoon, should the weather permit, will be devoted to sight-seeing.

The Rockford Rifles will arrive in the morning.

A Brutal Assault.

Shortly after the supper hour Sunday evening, a young Chinaman bearing the euphonious name of Ah Sin, started out on Milwaukee street for a stroll. Near the railroad, where the old City hotel was located, John Murray, employed as a freight conductor on the Northwestern road spied the Mongolian, and thought he might realize a little enjoyment from him. The result was the Chinaman lost two front teeth, and had his face generally bruised and cut. No provocation had been given to Murray for the outrage, as the Chinaman could not speak a word of English, and was peacefully pursuing his way, neither doing nor intending offense to any one. Marshal Hogan succeeded two hours after the affair in arresting Murray, but not without some difficulty as Murray resisted and was aided by two or three others. He was arraigned before Judge Patten this morning, and pleaded guilty. The Chinaman's face was in a terrible condition, his lips swollen, and his forehead cut. In explanation Murray said: "I intended only to have a little fun with the Chinaman, and crossed over to where he was. I said, 'Hello John Chinaman,' and touched him with my foot. He turned around and said something which I understood to be s——b, and I knocked him down. I'm not sure that is what he said, as I am not familiar with the Chinese language, but that is what I supposed to be the substance of the remark." Touching the Chinaman with his foot, was afterward admitted to be a kick, about the center of the celestial's body. Dr. D. F. Williams, who dressed the Chinaman's wounds, testified to the fact. A number of citizens in court expressed great indignation at the unprovoked brutality of Murray. He was fined $25 and costs, and given one day in jail.

What Children Can Do.

Nearly all day Saturday and to-day was spent by the teachers in the schools and a few friends in arranging the articles contributed by the children for the Industrial exhibit which will be one of the great features of the Teacher's Convention to be held here this week, comenceing Wednesday. The rooms used for the exibit, present a very beautiful and tasteful appearance, with the variety of pretty things.
exposed. Everything in the exhibition, is the handiwork of the school children, and was made at home and not under the supervision of their instructors. The majority of fancy work, is of more than ordinary excellence, and some of it very ingenious. Nearly every description of work of which young people are capable, is represented, and an inspection will repay any one.

THE GLORIOUS FOURTH.

The Preparations Complete for the Grand Celebration—The Parade and Other Features.

The preparations for the celebration of the Fourth are now complete, and it is safe to say, that the most sanguine expectations will be realized, provided of course, that the weather is fine, and no unforeseen accident occurs. The arrangements have been made on a grand scale, and are in competent hands, who will see that everything is executed to the best advantage. The first attraction of general interest will be the street parade, which will be followed by the speaking and the reading of the Declaration of Independence. A variety of amusements have been provided to succeed the oratorical feast, including the mammoth balloon ascension, the base ball game between the Oaklands, of Chicago, and the crack home club, the fire works and minor sports without number. Everything indicates a most successful celebration.

THE PARADE.

The parade to-morrow will be one of largest exhibition of street pagneatry ever witnessed her.

About That Reaper Trial.

To the Editor.

The person who wrote the article in regard to the reaper trial at Johnstown, and published the same in the morning sheet, July 1st, either was ignorant of the facts or lied wilfully, as the McCormick did not go in last nor come out first, and it threw many loose bundles besides those untied by the farmers. The Buckeye had no expert, as Mr. C. S. Serfass, named as expert, had never seen but one binder in the field before the one I sold on the field at Johnstown. The entire article was full of gross misrepresentations and willful misstatements and was published in the morning sheet, simply, as one of the editors of that paper said because it was a matter of dollars and cents. All I wanted was an honest account of the trial, each machine receiving full credit for what it actually did in the trial. I wanted no misrepresentation made in favor of the McCormick or any other machine simply on account of "dollars and cents." I am freely wiling to leave the work done by the Buckeye machine at that trial, to the farmers of Rock county, who were present and saw the machines work side by side.

Henry Hudson's Last Voyage.

Among the most noteworthy of early navigators both for the importance of his discoveries and the mystery that enshrouds his fate, was Henry Hudson. He was born in England about the middle of the sixteenth century, and from early youth he was accustomed to a seafaring life. Hardy, brave and adventurous, he eagerly accepted a commission from a company of London merchants to search for the northwest passage, and in 1607 sailed in a small vessel, with a crew of only ten men and a boy, to the east coast of Greenland. On reaching latitude 80 degrees he encountered an impassable barrier of ice, and after three months of fruitless explorations returned to England for the purpose of organizing another expedition.

In April of the following year Hudson again set sail, and endeavored to make his way between Nova Zembla and Spitzbergen. His hopes were again frustrated by immense fields of ice, and he returned to England without having accomplished anything of importance. Undaunted, however, by these failures, he entered the service of the Dutch East India Company, and in April, 1609, sailed from Amsterdam in the ship Half-Moon for Davis Strait. Finding the climate too severe for his crew, Hudson sailed southward along the coast of America, and on the 11th of September discovered the beautiful river which has since borne his name. Enchanted by the loveliness of the shores, he sailed up the river until he reached the head of navigation, where Albany now stands. He afterward continued his voyage south as far as Chesapeake Bay, and then returned to England.

Hudson began his fourth and last voyage in April, 1610, with a crew of twenty-three sailors. In June and July he passed through Davis Strait, and entered and explored the great bay which nows bears his name. Disappointed at not finding the westward passage he was seeking, he determined to winter there and resume the voyage in the following spring; but by the time the ice broke up his provisions were so nearly exhausted that he was compelled to make preparations to return. His crew became mutinous through fear, it is said, that he might leave some of them behind, being so short of provisions. Gaining possession of the ship, they put Hudson, with his son and seven infirm sailors, in an open shallop, and sent them adrift. The crew managed to reach England sometime in 1611, and one of the mutineers betrayed their guilty secret. An expedition was at once dispatched in search of the great navigator, but no trace of him was ever found.—Harper's Weekly.

The Girl Who Dares.

Young women who are not smart in much of anything else are always smart in love. Their invention never fails them, and there is always a stroke of boldness in it that would amaze the world if undertaken by anybody else. Something great, therefore, is always to be looked for from the innocent and apparently docile young women who are driven into a corner by love. They repeatedly show how the terrestrial angel rushes in where the other kind would naturally fear to tread.

There are a great many illustrations of this, but the recent exploit of a young woman in Arkansas is a little out of the ordinary run of illustrations. As young men are more common out there than in this part of the country—or rather as young women are more uncommon—this particular Arkansas girl had two lovers. Like a true girl, she was highly delighted with both of them, and probably, just like a girl also, she would have been delighted still more had her lovers numbered a dozen or a score. But as they did not, she had to get along with two; and she endured it like a martyr. When the time came to determine between them she found that she had made a mess of it by engaging herself to the wrong young man. She was not long in finding this out and notifying the other young man. Her proposition was to marry the one to whom she was engaged and elope with the other in six months.

This scheme seems to have been accepted, as both propositions have been carried out. It was something that could be made effective in Arkansas. It is a good enough thing in its way for any part of the West where boys are cheap and girls are scarce. It wouldn't do here, however, where there are not boys enough for every girl to have one, and it would be a pretty hazardous undertaking for a girl to carry off two within six months. Nevertheless, it can not always be told what a girl won't do when she gets in love. That which goes for common sense doesn't have much show in a struggle with love.—Philadelphia Times.

The Great Horse Remedy,

Cole's Veterinary Carbolisalve

For the cure of CUTS, WOUNDS, BRUISES, COLLAR AND SADDLE GALLS, MANGE, CHAFES, CHAPS, SORES, ABSCESSES, SPEED-CRACKS, SCRATCHES, CRACKED HEEL, THRUSH, ROTTING FROG, INFLAMMATIONS AND ALL SKIN AND HOOF DISEASES.

Flies will never trouble a sore upon which it is used. It is always soft, easily applied, and does not gum the collar or pads. It toughens the feet, keeps the frog soft and healthy, prevents the hoof becoming brittle, and will grow a new tough hoof in a short time. It is penetrating and soothing, thoroughly cleanses and heals sores quickly and permanently, and is the only preparation that will cure Cuts, Wounds, Galls and Sores, and bring the hair in the original color. It will cure any case of Scratches, Speed Crack or Cracked Heel.

COLE'S VETERINARY CARBOLISALVE is used and recommended by the leading horsemen and stockmen of the country, and is acknowledged the best remedy in existence for general stable use.

Pound cans, $1.00; small cans, 50 cents.
